Foreword.

HE Chamber of Commerce, the Mayor of Shelbyville, the Commercial Clubs and Mayors of Moweaqua, Findlay, Windsor, Stewardson and Tower Hill, with the progressive men of each of these Shelby County towns and cities, have joined hands in the making of this booklet. It is intended to bring the kindred spirits together in boosting the interests of the whole county collectively and each town and city separately, by showing to the best advantage their diversity of wealth and resources, and presenting their practical claims to a share in the many industries which will be forthcoming in this new era of expansion by the development of light and heavy manufactories.

The object of this book is to attract more good people to Shelbyville and its sister towns and cities, and to hold out the "glad hand" to new investors in this thriving, ambitious Central Illinois section.

There is this that may always be said about Shelbyville and Its Neighbors: they are hospitable. They will welcome you with a gracious smile, and give you at all times of the best they have.

for itself a favorable impression at first sight. The Viaduct Bridge spanning the Valley of the Kaskaskia—a noticeable piece of engineering skill—and the lay of the land about the depot, with the river view just before your eyes, and the busy City Electric Plant in the immediate background beyond the station preparing for the brilliant evening illumination of street and home, makes a cheerful and picturesque landscape to bid you welcome to a tasteful and thriving city of to-day. One would scarcely think the first log cabin was the main object of interest in 1825 about this now modern American town and that there were more red men than white about these quarters at one time. In this year of grace, 1914, it is the popular center of a county of 40,000 well-to-do, aspiring people who look back upon these echoes of the past as a fabulous tale of a by-gone age.

This bright little city of the present has its water works, its electric light plant, gas, its telephone—local and State-wide—its ice manufactory, four good banks, parcels post, postal savings bank, city and rural free deliveries. It has paved streets, good sewers, numerous auto garages, handsome school buildings, elegant churches, and comfortable residences equal in style and convenience to those of the greater, luxuriant older cities of the East or the modern centers of Europe.

1830, a modest little frame structure. Today Shelbyville has one of the finest high school buildings in the State. The companion buildings are convenient, modern edifices, with large playgrounds and the modern facilities which make "going-to-school" a different problem from that of even a few years ago.

In those olden days when a pioneer was satisfied to set in a high-backed pew or on a rough board with no back, church worship was often conducted in private houses. The first house of worship in Shelbyville was made of hewn logs and owed its being to the Methodists, whose circuit riders were famous all through the new country for their fearless courage and intrepidity.

Now, there are at least fourteen churches represented in the places of worship here—the First Methodist, Second Methodist, Presbyterian, Baptist, Unitarian, Catholic, The Christian, German Lutheran, German Reformed, Free Methodist, Colored Methodist, Church of Christ, The Adventists, and the Christian Scientists. The recently built houses express the latest ideas in architecture and add greatly to the outward beauty of the place.

The Carnegie Library is a beautiful building located on North Broadway, one of the swell streets of Shelbyville. The lawn about it sets it off finely, and the new high school adjacent, with the nearby up-to-date homes, and the wealth of foliage on the maples lining the surrounding streets, makes a sight which is good for one's optics.

has always been foremost in good deeds as well as in the use of telling words, and has to the full the respect and esteem of a great constituency at home and abroad.

Shelbyville with its delightfully shady streets, wide sidewalks and well-paved roadways makes an attractive union point for teachers' meetings, for church anniversaries, and the gatherings of political, business and fraternal associations. During the past year the Methodist District Conference had a week or ten days' session, and so heartily did they enjoy the hospitality and conveniences of the little city that the convention for 1914 has been appointed for the same place.

For years the Chautauqua gatherings have drawn to Shelbyville thousands upon thousands of the good people from all points of the compass within a radius of fifty miles, and this has become one of the importantly looked for outing and vacation attractions of midsummer. The cottagers relish the freedom from the usual home cares, and young and old enjoy the swimming pool, the croquet grounds and the boating on the lake, and most of all the musical and literary attractions.

For automobiling, the roads, in the season, about city and county, are among the best. The well-to-do farmers, the medical men, the merchants, and thrifty citizens generally, have indulged in this locomotor to the extent of over three hundred machines, making this a conspicuous center nine months of the year for this ingenious American invention of exploitation, business and pleasure.

GENERAL ISAAC SHELBY,
A Hero of the Revolution in Whose Honor
the City Was Named.

Shelby County and Shelbyville were named to honor General Isaac Shelby,oldest son of General Evan Shelby, a distingnished colonist and soldier of Welsh extraction who served with credit in the old Indian wars as captain, colonel and general. General Isaac Shelby, the son, was one of the heroes of the Revolution. His services in North and South Carolina won him a sword and a pair of pistols from the legislature of North Carolina after the battle of King's Mountain. He became the first Governor of Kentucky in 1792, and was the successful commander of a brigade under General William Henry Harrison in the War of 1812, receiving from Congress a gold medal for gallant conduct at the battle of the Thames in 1813.

Today Shelby County has a population of about 40,000 people, Shelbyville leading with 5,000 and Moweaqua, Tower Hill, Findlay, Stewardson, Windsor, Cowden, Strasburg and Herrick the most important neighbors in the county. The county covers about thirty miles from North to South, and in its widest part is about thirty-six. Its area is about 800 square miles, constituting over half a million acres of the best soil in Central Illinois. Shelbyville is delightfully located with diversity enough in its facial characteristics to make it residentially picturesque for permanence of abode, and an abundance of table lands for manufactories.

A Fine Banking Town.

Shelbyville's banks speak most significantly as to the wealth and general prosperity of the community whose financial interests they serve. With four banks and trust companies they handle the funds of the county seat and outlying sections with a success which gives the district a high rating for individual, mercantile and banking credit. The capital of the banking institutions, with surplus and undivided profits, amounts to nearly $325,000 00; the deposits about $1,250,000.00—showing the healthy condition of Shelbyville as a financial center.

The First National Bank is located on Main and South Morgan streets, right near the center of the city, where they now have convenient banking rooms. But in the near future will erect a new home with all the more modern facilities, making another fine feature in the city street architecture. The Shelby Loan and Trust Company's rooms are in the First National Bank Building, supplementing the opportunities of its neighbor bank in certain particulars specifically covered by a trust company.

The Shelby County State Bank has a fine building on Main Street, near Morgan, with all the up-to-date facilities for the modern bank, and it is one of the best known and most successful financial institutions of the county.

The Citizens' National have commodious offices, also on Main Street, near the Court House. The four banks giving the center of a county of 40,000 people the best of conveniences for banking business.

The first newspaper published in Shelbyville was appropriately named "The Prairie Flower." It was established by a Marylander who had

A MEMORABLE DEBATE.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN

Made a Characteristic Speech in Shelbyville in 1856.

The Shelby County Court House has been honored by the presence at various periods of many distinguished members of the Illinois bar. Abraham Lincoln, General Edwin D. Baker, United States Senator, killed at Ball's Bluff, General John A.McClernand and General James H. Shields were among the more brilliant who made this a part of their stamping grounds.

In 1856 a debate on the claims of Fremont and Dayton on the one ticket and Buchanan and Breckenridge on the other to the presidency was arranged to take place between Abraham Lincoln, representing the Republicans, and Lawyer Anthony Thornton the Democrats. Lincoln's humorous reference to the sixteen Republicans who then represented the vanguard of his party in Shelby County was characteristic in the extreme: "Fellow citizens: I rarely address my fellow countrymen on any question of importance without experiencing conflicting emotions. I experience such at this hour as I never experienced before. It is a matter of regret to me that I have so learned, so able, so eloquent a man as my friend Anthony here to reply to what I shall say. On the other hand, I take some comfort from the fact that there are but sixteen Republicans in ShelbyCounty, and therefore, however poorly I may defend my cause, I can hardly harm it if I do it no good." The sixteen in Shelby County swelled to 150 at the polls in November. Judge Anthony Thornton, Lincoln's opponent in this debate, was one of the most distinguished leaders of the bar in this section of Illinois. He was a Kentuckian by birth who came to this State in 1836. He identified himself closely with the success and growth of the section and was one of the leading Democrats of Illinois during his entire career. He was a man of commanding influence, sincerely respected, and from A Distinguished Shelbyville Lawyer 1870 to 1873 served on the Supreme Bench of the State.

S. W. Moulton, another lawyer of whom Shelbyville is very proud, was a son of the Old! Bay State who came His persistent to Illinois in 1845. efforts aided in placing upon the statute books of this State the first bill establishing free schools in the great Prairie State, he being also the father of the bill. He was an enthusiastic Union Democrat, and during the Civil War was a strong supporter of President Lincoln and his vigorous policies. He has left a reputation among his fellow citizens which will always be an honor to his memory.

Another lawyer of distinction whose reputation adds not a little to the comfortable pride of the city in its successful men, was the late Howland J. Hamlin, who was a son of New York. Coming to Shelbyville in his twentieth year, during his career he won both fame and fortune, and as Attorney-General of the State of Illinois made a fine record to distinguish himself and honor his home. Associated in law practice with W. C. Kelly the firm stood high in all parts of the State, and especially among their fellow townsmen. Among the leaders of the bar to-day in Shelbyville there are a number of well-known men: the Kelleys, Chafee & Chew, Geo. B. Rhoads, Milligan, Whitaker,

If there is one specially attractive feature about Shelbyville which invites the attention of a stranger on his first visit to the city it is that of the unusual number of fine homes everywhere evident off the main street. On Morgan, North and South Broadway, North Main, Walnut, North Washington, and all the intersecting streets there are beautiful homes with spacious lawns, indicating a cultivated spirit predominant in the architecture, sidewalks, and spaciousness of the lots, and those little niceties of ornamentation which speak well for a city and show its general trend.

The electric lighting service, the tele-

There is no dilapidation here, but thrift and aspiration evident everywhere. On a Saturday the scenes about its mercantile places, the banks, and the station, the post office, and all the places suitable for a "getting together" pride in keeping up with the bigger market places in catering to the buyers about their section, and the post office has all the facilities. The elevators, the big lumber yard of the O. H. Paddock Lumber Company, and the dry goods men, the druggists, the grocers, the hardware men, the poultry merchant and the butcher all find Findlay a good place in which to live and do business. The leading insurance firm represents fifteen of the largest fire insurance companies in the country and reach out for business all through the county. For agricultural machinery and supplies Findlay is also a fine centre.

There are many elegant homes located in the various parts of the town, showing the wealth of the leading men of a city of fifteen hundred people, and the general appearance of the farms speak volumes in addition.

Even the railroad station speaks favorably of the place it serves. It is neat and attractive. There are two good hotels, and some good eating places, conveniently located, all testimonials for a "live town."

A commanding position is given the second largest city of Shelby County by its contiguity to Mason and Christian counties. Moweaqua not only has 2,000 people to draw from within its own immediate corporate borders, but it has 5,500 more to cater to in these close outlying sections.

The Illinois Central, whose tracks through this section are always teeming with freight or passenger trains give the city an efficient transportation ally, bringing it into close relations with Decatur, Assump-

The religious sentiments of the city are represented by five churches, the Methodists having a beautiful new edifice with a $2,700 grand organ; the Baptists, Presbyterians, the Christian and the Catholic. Moweaqua boasts a fine school building with all the modern improvements, having a high school department fitting a student for a college course in the University of Illinois.

The residence sections of the city are not limited to any one point of the compass. Fine homes are located in different quarters, and there are some distinctively aristocratic looking bungalows and elegant houses among them.

ANDREW & ADAMS, GRAIN DEALERS.

RESIDENCE OF MAYOR J. W. SELBY,
Tower Hill, Illinois.

Tower Hill-Illinois.

ON THE B. & O. AND BIG FOUR.

Six miles from the City of Pana and ten from Shelbyville, on the main line of the Big Four, and on the Southwestern Division of the Baltimore & Ohio, there lies a very noticeable, ambitious neighbor of these two larger towns. Just outside, on the Big Four—on the Pana side—the transcontinental lines make a point of "holding up" for the big through passenger trains to pass each other, thus leading to the query of "what place is this?"

Just before you reach it from the Shelbyville side there is a big coal mine which makes it specially observable from this point, and while the census gives them a population of less than 1,200 souls, they have the spirit of some thousands, and ambitions to correspond. Mining is the backbone in the industrial field, but Tower Hill has another still more lucrative field from which to draw trade and traffic, and with the railroad connections they have to Lakewood, Cowden, Herrick, Effingham, and good roads to Oconee and the many agricultural centers about Tower Hill can count upon a great urban and suburban resource which Uncle Sam's census takers have not given her credit for.

They have a number of fine churches for her people; a commodious modern school building; with two hotels, and a well-capitalized bank with a responsibility of $300,000 where they can transact that portion of their financial business. The Tower Hill Bank is located centrally on the main street, and is the favorite place of deposit for both farmer and miner.

Among her merchants there are all usually found in a central point like Tower Hill. The drygoodsmen, the clothiers, the hardware dealer, the tailor, the grain and feed man, the photographer, the confectioner, the boot and shoe man, a number of grocers and butchers, the milliner, the professional men—the doctors and the lawyers, the carriage and wagon maker, the stable man, the furniture man, the grain elevators, the real estate man, and some of the largest general furnishing stores in the country. In fact there are all the things necessary for comfort and good living in a growing town.

Its newspaper, The Breeze, a weekly, sets the pace for the progressive spirits in its section, and backs up all good propositions for the betterment of Tower Hill, and is all the time for home and county. With Pana on one side and Shelbyville on the other it has a good-natured rivalry, making up in spirit and audacity what is wanting in numbers.

Among the homes of this industrial and farming town there are many fine buildings, and they are not confined to any one section, there being tasteful and notable ones on either side of the railroad tracks. On the higher lands, up from the business section, there are many fine places, and in the country for miles around the cozy and comfortable, the pretentious and bigger farm places, which indicate that Tower Hill has a backbone with which to brace up its frontal—the coal mines.

With its telephone handy for all sections, gas, electricity, plenty of water for all purposes, and its fine railroad facilities, the ever ready automobile for immediate use, and good liveries, Tower Hill is in touch with modern cities. She means to grow.

Tower Hill's neighbors, Oconee, Lakewood, Cowden, and Herrick, in this southwestern section of Shelby County, give her a backing of good substantial quality to which she can turn for expansion in trade matters. Lakewood is about six miles away on the Baltimore & Ohio, and is first on the line of railroad, with two hundred good people. Cowden is the next of importance in this direction. With its 1,000 people and two banks, and with the B. & O. acting as transportation agent, it is a railroad center of some note as well as a live stock district of increasing growth. It has a number of fine churches, many notable private residences, and one of the very best public school buildings in this section of Shelby County. The newspaper office is one of the up-to-date establishments, and the O. A. Jewell weekly is a leader in public matters in this end of the county. There are two good hotels, telephones, electricity, gas, plenty of water, and Post Office facilities covering parcels post, rural free delivery and postal savings. The railroad brings them into close connection with Tower Hill.

By a convenient transfer at Cowden, Tower Hill is brought into rapport with Herrick on the Clover Leaf Railroad, and this gives them another 1,000 people to cater to. It is a lively little community, with a fine school, some good churches, a bank of its own and its newspaper, postoffice, and some enterprising business men in lumber, grain, coal, stock, etc., with a fertile country around it, it makes another desirable market for Tower Hill.

Oconee, a nearby town, is brought into the way of trade by team and auto, and with the constantly increasing availability of the automobile in chasing up and delivering orders Tower Hill has an opportunity for expansion all about southwestern Shelby County. With a far-seeing Mayor at the head of its public policies all these little modern facilities for the increase of trade are being utilized, and Tower Hill "is in the running" with Pana and Shelbyville for a generous share of what's going for fifteen or twenty-five miles outside of its own special limits. The country all about this district is very fertile, and the farmers, poultry men and stock raisers are well-to-do and progressive in all matters.
